Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

This application currently names joint inventors. In considering patentability of the claims under 35 U.S.C. 103(a), the examiner presumes that the subject matter of the various claims was commonly owned at the time any inventions covered therein were made absent any evidence to the contrary. Applicant is advised of the obligation under 37 CFR 1.56 to point out the inventor and invention dates of each claim that was not commonly owned at the time a later invention was made in order for the examiner to consider the applicability of 35 U.S.C. 103(c) and potential 35 U.S.C. 102(e), (f) or (g) prior art under 35 U.S.C. 103(a).

The factual inquiries set forth in Graham v. John Deere Co., 383 U.S. 1, 148 USPQ 459 (1966), that are applied for establishing a background for determining obviousness under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) are summarized as follows:

1. Determining the scope and contents of the prior art.
2. Ascertaining the differences between the prior art and the claims at issue.
3. Resolving the level of ordinary skill in the pertinent art.
4. Considering objective evidence present in the application indicating obviousness or nonobviousness.

Claims 1-11 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Kong (US 6,886,152B1)

Kong discloses applying a branching penalty(col. 5,lines 11-14). In order to assign a branching penalty, there would be required to have information regarding the types of cells and their arrangement and wiring, as the loads and delays would be required in the calculation of the delays(col. 3,lines 48-55). An algorithm calculates if a better result is obtained with a different arrangement(col. 4,lines 38-43). This would correspond to the limitation of virtually inserting a load at a point. The point at which a buffer should be inserted is determined(col. 5,lines 16-20) is determined using the results. The wiring information is changed according to this result(col. 8, lines 10-16). Timing characteristics are included in the calculation(col. 2,lines 1-10). The delay is calculated (col. 3,lines 50-55). Determining where the buffer is inserted according to the results of these calculations(col. 6, ines 40-45).

Kong is silent with respect to the limitation of "changing the driving cell to a cell having the calculated drive capability" and with respect to other details of the calculations of the dependent claims.

It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention that Kong encompasses the limitation "changing the driving cell to a cell having the calculated drive capability" because Kong discloses that the router selects the loads routed through the buffer(col. 6,lines 40-50) and it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention that the load chosen would be that required by the results of the calculations. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to have carried out the calculations of the dependent claims such as determining the routes with the tightest time constraints because these are optimization steps which would be desirable in the optimization of the layout which one of ordinary skill in the art would be able to determine.
